

Breakthrough Integrated HR, Benefits Administration, Payroll and Time & Attendance Solution Accelerates Marketplace Adoption

The Associated Press

ADP (<http://www.adp.com/>) @, a leading provider of HR, payroll and benefits administration services, announced that more than 2,000 mid-sized organizations (50-999 employees) have selected ADP Workforce Now (<http://www.adp.com/workforcenow>) to help them do more with less, improve their bottom line and simplify the compliance process while finding, growing and keeping great people.

Organizations in a myriad of industries are leveraging ADP Workforce Now to increase the productivity of their HR (<http://www.adp.com/solutions/employer-services/human-resources.spx>), benefits and payroll teams while controlling labor costs and focusing on their core business.

Monroe Bank & Trust, a 375-employee community bank located in Michigan, implemented Workforce Now in order to provide its employees a higher-level of service and senior management with greater access to information.

"It's like the sun is shining on Monroe Bank & Trust again, because of Workforce Now," said Barbara Klemans, senior vice president of Monroe Bank & Trust. "The accessibility to data, the reporting, and the benefits and recruitment capabilities are excellent. All the things we wanted in a solution are there for us in Workforce Now."

Monroe Bank & Trust uses ADP Workforce Now to integrate HR, payroll, time and labor management, and benefits administration, thereby helping to create an online information self-service environment for employees, managers, and business owners. The solution provides a single point of access for information and helps to lower operating costs because it does not require an investment in hardware, software, upgrades, or special IT support.

"When Workforce Now was launched in October, we knew the mid-market was hungry for a complete, integrated workforce management solution," said Campbell Langdon, president of ADP Major Account Services. "That's why companies have shown such tremendous enthusiasm for this offering. The integrated, end-to-end nature of the solution combined with a single service experience means clients can quickly begin using the solution and generating a return on their investment."
